SOCIO-ECONOMIC CONDITIONS AND DWELLING PATTERNS OF CHAMOTU VILLAGE: A SURVEY-BASED STUDY

INTRODUCTION: Himachal Pradesh, formed in 1971, was predominantly a rural and economically backward region with limited infrastructure such as roads, electricity, health services, and markets due to its rugged mountainous terrain. Rural socio-economic conditions in the hills differ significantly from the plains. Agriculture is still practiced through traditional methods because of small and fragmented landholdings and the difficulty of using machinery in hilly terrain. While rural areas rely heavily on subsistence agriculture, urban regions are engaged in non-agricultural activities. Agriculture plays a central role in supporting livelihoods, generating food, employment, and household savings. In Himachal Pradesh, a majority of the population resides in rural areas and depends extensively on natural resources for survival.

Chamotu village in Palampur Tehsil of Kangra district is one such rural settlement where agriculture forms the primary occupation. Topography, climate, and soil strongly influence farming practices. The style of housing—particularly slate-roofed structures—reflects adaptation to the climatic conditions. Construction materials depend on the family's economic status and availability of local materials. Thus, the rural landscape of Chamotu mirrors the interplay of physical environment and socio-economic characteristics.

Survey research provides essential quantitative and qualitative data on household socio-economic status, demographic composition, dwelling conditions, access to services, and livelihood patterns. Chamotu village (Latitude: 32°9'5.93", Longitude: 76°26'6.4", Altitude: 1532 m) is located 20 km from Dharamshala and 12 km from Palampur. The village covers 126.3 hectares, has 172 houses, and a population of 855, with an overall literacy rate of 80 percent. Scheduled Caste and Tribal populations constitute 9.12% and 30.64% respectively. About 54.5 percent of the population is engaged in work. The local language is Pahari. Nearby settlements include Jia, Dadh, Pathiar, and Majhetali.

DEMOGRAPHIC AND OCCUPATIONAL PATTERN: The Government of Himachal Pradesh (2001) reported that about 66.71% of the state's population depends on agriculture. Terraced cultivation dominates due to hilly terrain, and most holdings belong to small and marginal farmers. Over the decades, a shift from subsistence crops to horticulture and commercial vegetables has occurred due to favourable climatic conditions.

Several studies highlight this shift:

- Kumar (2012) observed increased cultivation of wheat and paddy and a decline in barley and maize, alongside a rise in vegetables, fruits, and spices.
- Sharma (2011) found agricultural diversification in Shimla, Kullu, Solan, and Lahaul-Spiti, particularly towards fruits and vegetables.
- Rahut & Scarf (2012) noted that in Himalayan regions, non-farm income contributes nearly 58% to household income, with improved education enabling households to enter high-return occupations.
- Gautam & Anderson (2016) found livelihood diversification beneficial only when households access high-return sectors.
- Aghaghia (2016) recorded rapid livelihood transformation in Kinnaur, driven by monoculture apple cultivation, though this posed long-term risks.
- Subedi (2017) documented livelihood changes in Mustang (Nepal), where households shifted to apple farming, vegetable cultivation, migration, and tourism-based activities.

In Chamotu village, similar patterns appear: households continue to rely on agriculture and livestock but increasingly adopt commercial horticulture such as apples, plums, and litchi. Dairy products—milk, ghee, paneer, khoya—form important income sources. Livestock ownership (cows, goats, sheep) remains a key indicator of economic well-being. Some households also use donkeys and horses for transporting goods.

has erupted recently. It began with comments made last year over the need to work 70 hours weekly in the interest of nation-building by Infosys founder NR Narayana Murthy. The discussion became even more fierce after the chairman of engineering giant, Larsen and Toubro, SN Subrahmanyam, pronounced that he was in favour of a 90-hour working week. On a jocular note, he even advised employees to come in on Sundays rather than simply staring at their wives. An off-the-cuff remark, it has gone viral with a million memes being released on the internet.

It would be unfair to judge committed corporate achievers like Narayana Murthy or Subrahmanyam on the basis of casual comments. Yet, they were clearly dead serious in proposing long working hours.

Given their eminence in the business arena, it is incumbent on us to examine their views with due gravity. The corporate leaders evidently had spouses without time-consuming careers like their own. The result is a failure to consider the pivotal role of caregivers in the developmental matrix even in advocating long working hours in VITAL VIEWPOINT: There is little regulation on working hours in the informal sector.
